States the Nationalist Side and Their Plan For Home Rule.

Fight Is Over, No Matter What Happens and Ireland Has Won.

Attaches No Importance to Dangers of Threatened Civil Strife.

WILL NOT INJURE OR OPPRESS

John E. Redmond, chairman of the Irish Nationalist party, reviewing the Irish situation and the future outlook, given out the following:

The fight for home rule is over, no matter what happens. Even if the present Government were to go out of office, Great Britain can never go back upon a decision of the House of Commons, twice affirmed by majorities well over 100, after long and detailed debate, on a measure introduced after two general elections had been fought, large and so far as the opposition could manage, fought mainly on that specific issue, Ireland has won.

Yet for the moment, while the fate of the bill is still before the country hangs undecided, we are still concerned and we must be concerned (in Ireland) with the abstract question, whether it is necessary as Unionists contend that all Irish affairs shall be referred to an assembly in which Irishmen are outnumbered by nearly six to one, and in which Irish interests are always made a pawn in the political game. We on our side have only to hold the ground that is won already, but our opponents in Ireland are making preparations which cause astonishment to the civilized world. Traditionally the party of "law and order," they are prepared to resist an act of Parliament, with the King's signature appended to it, by open rebellion. They profess to be armed—and it is certainly true that they are drilling—though in very inconsiderable numbers—but they constantly put up the claim through their spokesmen for an immunity from all the consequences of defying the law. They have made all their arrangements, it appears, to form a "provisional government."

I am perfectly certain that no man in the majority of Irishmen wishes to injure or oppress our fellow countrymen, the Unionists of northeast Ulster. In the first place, it is to our interest to conciliate them. We know their value to the community. But in the second place and chiefly we have had experience of what oppression means. We know how bitter a spirit of resistance it breeds. We know that in the long run it does not even profit those who exercise it. For this reason, because I am sure the interests of Unionist Ulster will receive full and generous consideration, I attach no importance to the threatened dangers of civil strife. Until the bill is passed into law, and until the obstacle presented by the prejudices of a few hundred hereditary legislators is surmounted, we shall be obliged to make it our first care to keep the present Government established in office and to keep the British public informed of the real truth of facts.

But a few more months will see this business ended and we shall then be able to set ourselves to the more fruitful work of forming an Irish administration to deal in Ireland with the problems of Irish life. It is part of our difficulty that we do not begin afresh, as the younger countries have done, at least to some extent, with a clean slate. But at the same time it surely adds to the interest and the prestige of our task that we shall resume an interrupted chapter in the world's history, and that the very building where our labors must take place will be associated with glorious names in the past history of statesmanship.

We shall go on with the work that Grattan and his contemporaries were engaged in when Dublin was beautified by those edifices which for a century past have been little more than monuments of a departed greatness. But we shall go there with an advantage which was denied to the men of Grattan's Parliament. Into our councils we shall call all Ireland. We shall find our strength not only in the church of the majority, the church in which Daniel O'Connell lived and died, but in those other communions, from one of which came in my boyhood John Mitchell and John Martin, and from another from which I have known the leader of all of us, whose work we are now bringing to completion, Charles Stewart Parnell.

CANON SHEEHAN.

The Rev. Patrick Augustine Sheehan, D. D., novelist, essayist, lecturer and Canon of Cloyne, Ireland, who passed away last week, was widely known among Catholics in America and England as a novelist whose works struck a new note and one that appealed to the reader. He wrote intimately and sympathetically of the life of young priests and their dealing with the men and women of their parishes. His heroes were clergymen, types of those known to every Catholic, and he knew how to depict their lives, struggles, failures, successes. Perhaps his best known book was "The New Curate," but "Luke Delmage," "The Triumph of Failure" and "Geoffrey Austin, Student," were widely read. He was born at Mallow, County Cork, March 17, 1852, and received his education at St. Coleman College, Fermoy, and Maynooth, where he was ordained in 1875. His first charge was at the English mission in Devonshire. Later he was curate at Queenstown and then at Mallow. He was installed Canon of Cloyne Cathedral in 1903 and received an honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity from Leo XIII., who sent Father Sheehan a medal as a personal token.

VISITORS TO UNITY COUNCIL

All the citizens of New Albany, without distinction as to creed or politics, united this week in celebrating the one hundredth anniversary of the town and city. It was a very creditable affair throughout, and it may be said without boasting that the Catholic and Irish part of the population did themselves credit. The town was founded October 3, 1813, by Joel Abner and Nathaniel Scribner, who came from Albany, N. Y., but whose ancestors were Puritans from Connecticut. Nathaniel Scribner, the progenitor of the family having been a Revolutionary soldier. The Scribners were Presbyterians and men of fine moral character. They set aside lands for churches, schools and public purposes, such as market houses, court house, jail and parks. Their descendants still live in the city and in New Albany in large numbers.

But before the Scribners men of Irish blood and people of the Catholic faith had taken up lands in the vicinity of New Albany. It is a matter of record that the saintly missionary priest, Benedict Joseph Flaget, afterward Bishop of the diocese of Bardonia and Louisville, ministered to the few Catholic families who lived on the Knobs, now called Silver Hills, before the Scribners came; therefore the Catholic people of the city have a right to claim priority in the matter of pioneer citizenship, but they did not set up any such claim during the celebration which began last Sunday and ended on Thursday. The floats depicting the day thus made the affair very enjoyable for the "home-comers" as well as for the many thousands of citizens of Louisville who crossed the river to witness the ceremonies. The Governor of the State, Hon. Samuel M. Ralston; former Vice President Charles W. Fairbanks; and other distinguished men of Indiana, former Gov. Augustus E. Wilson, of Kentucky, who lived in New Albany in his early manhood and studied law under Michael C. Kerr, graced the occasion with their presence.

The crowning event of the centennial was the parade on Tuesday. It was the grandest pageant ever witnessed in this city, the procession requiring one hour and a quarter to pass a given point. In the procession the Catholic population did itself proud. Men, women and children from Holy Trinity and St. Mary's were much in evidence in the parade, and the Catholic section was conceded to be the finest of all. The floats depicting the early history of the church and schools as well as their advancement. The floats were beautifully constructed and were the admiration of everyone who witnessed the parade.

An interesting event connected with the centennial, and one which will not be forgotten when the fireworks and other displays shall have passed from the memory of the participants, was the publication of a Souvenir History of New Albany, embracing neatly printed and beautifully illustrated matter in book form. It was written by Edward Fitzpatrick, who is probably the best posted citizen of that city in the matter of its history, although he does not claim to be a pioneer. He acquired this knowledge through long years of study and investigation. The souvenir book was so good and so fair to all of the diversified interests which have developed during the past 100 years that the Centennial Committee was able to sell the 2,000 copies issued within a few days, and calls were made for more, but of course but one addition was printed. The souvenir book contains an epitome of the history of the city; tells of its churches, schools, business interests before the civil war; tells of the distinguished men who have lived and died in the city.

Holy Trinity parish, the history says, was organized seventy-seven years ago. St. Mary's sixty-three years ago. The Rev. Edward M. Waller built St. Mary's church as well as St. Edward's Hospital, a very nice tribute is paid to Father Waller, who gave his large patrimony of $40,000 to the foundation of the hospital, which is a great blessing to the city. The Rev. Louis Neyron built Holy Trinity and a brief sketch of this distinguished priest, who had been a soldier under Napoleon and who died at the age of ninety-six, is given in the book. The various Catholic societies, including the Hibernians,

CLARK READY FOR GETAWAY

Immediately on the announcement of the dismissal of State Labor Inspector B. J. Sand by Commissioner Newman for giving out statistics pertaining to Axton's labor record, the Kentucky Irish American called attention to the fact that in doing so Newman had exceeded his authority and that the information gathered for the Labor Bureau was intended for the benefit of the laboring interests and not for Commissioner Newman's personal use.

Since that statement was made in these columns it has been taken up by the press all over the State and Newman's slap at labor has stirred up a veritable hornet's nest, the consequences being that an inquiry will probably be made at the next session of the Legislature as to the status of the Labor Bureau, and incidentally Commissioner Newman's little boom for the gubernatorial nomination has been knocked into a cocked hat.

Now that it has been proven that Ben Sand's report on labor conditions in Axton's factory is but a repetition of former Labor Inspector Fitzburn's report, it is up to Duncan Clark, editor of the Herald, who claims to be a lover of fair play, to offer Mr. Sand an apology for the abuse heaped upon him in the last column, or either fire a broadside into the man who gave County former Inspector Fitzburn, who showed Axton in a far worse light than Sand, and who, by the way, was not discharged for embodying his findings in a public report by the then Republican Commissioner of Agriculture.

The attempt to smoke out Axton's running mates has thus far only met with fair success, the Bull Moose organ quietly printing a list this week in an obscure corner of the candidates running with the ten-hour-day nominee, but neglected to give the anxious public a line on who they were. Only a few are known, among them being H. I. Fox, known as the man who gave County governor Sherman a close race while tacked onto Roosevelt's kite, and who is a candidate for County Attorney; Theodore Diehl, beer wagon driver for Schlitz Brewing Company, a candidate for Alderman; C. B. Nordeman, anti-Prohibitionist leader, a candidate for Councilman; A. J. Hiernann, Junior Order leader, candidate for Councilman; J. T. Wallace, non-union painter for Illinois Central railroad, candidate for State Senator; Edward J.
Volz, bartender for Herman Onmann, candidate for Representative; C. K. Jackson, former bartender for Val Quinn, candidate for Magistrate. The list is but a sample of the material masquerading under the head of Progressive candidates and are good running mates for Jake Haeger's flying squadron of ex-politicians and ex-firemen, who are frequently appearing on the Police Court roster.

It has been suggested that when Duncan Clark, the Herald editor, makes his get-away for Chicago immediately after the election, he can do Louisville a good turn. His past offenses will be forgiven if he will arrange to take Filmore Tyson, Jake Haeger, Sam Owens, Mel Lapallie, Joe Martin, Hunter Ross, Richard Murray and a few more of the Progressive leaders along with him, the above having been a disturbing element in this city the past few elections, and their departure will improve the chances for a better and greater Louisville. In addition to being anti-Louisville in its policies the Herald has lately shown a tendency to be anti-American, a recent proof of this being a bitter attack on the Perry centennial sham battle when it was supposed the route of the British as depicted was very displeasing to the Canadian editor, who swears allegiance to old England and who is in favor of government of Louisville by Chicago, naturally as a true horn Irish subject being opposed to home rule.

WILL BE INSPIRING GATHERING

The Catholic Missionary Congress that meets in Boston Monday under the care of Cardinal O'Connell and the inspiration of the Church Extension Society, again directs all Catholic eyes to the work of that organization. In eight years it has made itself a power. Various were the opinions expressed during those eight years as to the present value and future efficiency of this new movement; but it has gone on growing and prospering. No one could ignore it. It is a standing, reasonable to the value of intelligent advertising even for a religious work.

The Missionary Congress of five years ago, Archbishop Quigley's own idea carried out by the society's officers, was a wonderful gathering, one that many might well call, for it actually took place, nothing short of a dream; but the dream found its realization. Now comes the call to Boston. There is less doubt as to the outcome of this second congress. It will certainly be a great gathering and productive of good by stirring up again the missionary spirit which sometimes latent yet is firm in every sincere Catholic heart. No one able to go should miss this congress. It ought to be an inspiring gathering, and from the past record of things done by the Extension Society there is every confidence that such it will be. One of the very best things in connection with the plans for the congress is the unselfish spirit animating its managers. Every missionary movement has its place, foreign missions, home missions, immigration and the colonies.

It has finally been decided to hold the following mass meetings on the closing evening, Wednesday, October 22: Symphony Hall, Boston; Boston College Hall, Boston; Mission Church Hall, Roxbury;
South Boston, Lynn, Haverhill, Marlboro, Lowell, Lawrence, Malden, Brockton, Salem and Natick.
Among the speakers for the mass meetings are many of the Bishops and several prominent laymen. At Symphony Hall, Hon. Joseph Scott, of Los Angeles, and Hon. Jeremiah E. Burke, of Boston, are to deliver addresses, besides the address of Archbishop Pitaval, of Santa Fe.

SOCIALISTS

And Their Motives Are Given in Scoring by Cardinal O'Connell.

Declares They Are Unmindful of Their True Obligation to Society.

Doctrines Strike at Foundation of Our Family Life and Religion.

HE BELIEVES IN TRADES UNION

His Eminence William Cardinal O'Connell prints an article in the Gateway for October entitled "Freedom—the Law of Christ," in which he rather bitterly attacks the motives of Socialists and says that the only means through which a fair adjustment of wages and social relationship may be brought about is Christianity, because of his rampant lu-dicalism, is a denial of his true obligations to society and his duty to his countrymen. This is what he says about Socialists:

"This natural discontent is fomented and intensified by the noisy agitators of Socialism, the enemies of God and man, who would overturn the foundations upon which human society is built, and exile God from his universe. This singular set of men who seek to conceal the malice of their real principles, but who can not, are a brood of disturbances. Their doctrines are an abomination striking at the foundations of family life and religion.
Their spirit is not new. A similar class of men were graphically described by St. Paul in his second epistle to the Thessalonians."

Cardinal O'Connell's article sets forth his ideas on the rights of workmen to organize themselves into unions and to strike. He says definitely that such right does belong to employees and says that he believes in the right of men to strike for living wages, but that he does not believe they have the right to commit violence. And this right, he says, arises out of the natural privilege of all men to provide for their families. Cardinal O'Connell writes:

"The maintenance of a home then is the standard by which the alimum wage dictated by the law of nature and prompted by the highest public policy. It is the clear right of the wage earner, and to protect this right he may make use of all legitimate means. He may cooperate with others to enforce it and form a union with his fellow workers to exert this adequate moral power to maintain and to better his condition within the limits of justice. To deny him this right is tyranny and an injustice. He has no other way to safeguard his interests. The rich and the powerful have many ways to protect their interests; the workman has only support of peaceful combination."

"Moreover, workmen's associations may peacefully agitate and seek to mould public opinion in their favor to bring about a redress of real grievances. A campaign of this kind must, however, be legitimately conducted, free from violations of justice and of charity and of the public peace. Finally, the worker in the last resort, has the right to refuse to work, that is to strike, and to induce by peaceful methods others to strike with him when this extreme measure becomes necessary to mitigate unendurable conditions or to wrest from an unreasonable employer just compensation for his labor after all other measures have failed."

"All this has its root in the law of nature which dictates that a man has a natural right to a wage which will maintain his home in frugal and reasonable comfort. All the other conclusions which we have laid down are but a logical flowing from this fundamental principle, on the ground that an individual possesses a natural right may make use of all legitimate means to protect it and to safeguard it from violation."

GREAT CATHOLIC WORK.

Pope Pius will sign a document next year which will be not only the most important to which he has affixed his signature during his Pontificate but one which is looked upon as the most important in the history of the Catholic church and one of the greatest reforms attempted by any Pope—namely the codification of the canon law decreed by Pope Pius in 1904 and now practically completed. The work, which has taken more than nine years, was in the hands of two commissions, one consisting of Cardinals and the other being made up of consultants assisted by the canonists of the leading universities and seminaries abroad, with the co-operation of the world's Catholic Bishops throughout the world. These commissions carefully prepared four volumes containing the text of the laws and recast the system while adding them. Cardinal Gaspari, the practical codifier in charge of the work, says that three of the largest rooms in the Vatican are filled with collections of decrees and constitutions which will cease to have effect when the Pope has promulgated the new code.

dertaking, would they have turned a single cent into the city or county treasury? Not they. Therefore their request for $23,000 of the taxpayers' money should be turned down. The General Council nor Fiscal Court have no right to impose this burden upon the people, who were neither considered or consulted. Until the guarantee fund is collected, the only evidence of good faith, the proposition to make the city pay the debt, even before a statement from the auditors has been submitted, is most ridiculous and absurd.

NOT DEMOCRACY.

After a long, weary wait in the hope of final reward the Democrats in the Postoffice have been given a severe blow by Postmaster Schmitt's appointment to Assistant Postmaster of a man who registered Republican no later than the 1912 election.

STAND FIRM.

Latest cable news is that ever since Lord Loreburn wrote his famous letter to the Times the whole Tory press has been frantically endeavoring to make the people believe that home rule is doomed and that in a few more days the Government will be down on its knees begging for mercy. Nobody believes this story any longer. While the Government deprecates that home rule may cause bloodshed in Ulster, and even this is doubtful, every member of the Cabinet is determined that to appear to grant even the smallest concession to those who are openly preaching sedition, would be the height of folly. Besides, there is no such difference between the revolution threatened in Ulster and real revolution as between a blow on a base drum and a shot from a thirteen-inch gun. People who really mean to make revolution don't go abroad advertising the fact any more than a man who wants to commit suicide takes the whole world into his confidence, or if he does it is quite sure that he does so in order that somebody may save him at the critical moment.

ENDURING AUTHORITY.

Prof. Mallock, an agnostic, tells us that every non-Catholic body is, as a religious system, in process of dissolution; it is fast ceasing to carry any weight as a doctrinal or moral power. The Catholic church, he says, is the sole living and enduring Christian authority. She alone has, or even claims to have, the power to speak or teach infallibly in faith or morality. She alone has an organization by which her laws can be enforced. Above all, she alone is able to give unity to a people composed of so many and so varied elements as ours, and form them into a great nation. In a word, to her alone the people of Australia must look to maintain for them in the consciences of citizens those fixed principles of religion and morality without which a self-governing people must ultimately fall into chaotic anarchy and ambitious despotism. Free institutions depend for their worth, stability and permanence on the virtue and intelligence of the people; but nature unaided is not sufficient, even under the best government and laws, to maintain the virtue and integrity of a people. Unless by grace from above him he can erect himself, how mean a thing is man. To nations as to individuals it has been said: "Without me you can do nothing." Unless God builds the house he labors in vain who builds it. Materialism and the denial of a personal God—material Governor of the universe—annihilate conscience, break down the barriers of sensuality, sow broadcast the seeds of moral death, and are fatal to true liberty and social order. A corrupt man is a selfish man. An appeal to duty or to the higher law finds no response in his conscience. A people without belief in God or in a future state will not long remain enlightened or noble or free. For its own protection therefore an age of democracy should be an age of religion. There is no progress worthy of the name where provision is not made for the growth of man's moral and spiritual religious nature, for the soul of man is naturally Christian.

The time for making the jubilee will expire December 8. No Catholic who is solicitous for the welfare of his soul should neglect to perform the works prescribed for the gaining of the great indulgence, attached to the fulfillment of the few conditions, so easy to be complied with. In all of our churches services for this purpose are being held, and everybody should give this important duty their first attention.

The Episcopal convention has divided into two factions, and the proceedings are not what were expected. The high church and low church elements are hopelessly divided and suggestions that the corporate name be changed and the prayer book revised have precipitated heated wrangles and long debate.

With 28,873 voters registered as Democrats, a marked increase over last year, John Buschmeyer's election as Mayor must follow. The Republicans, Progressives and Independents combined registered only 25,368.

Parents should co-operate as much as possible with the teachers in the work of building character. The school can not do all for the child.

CATHOLIC REVISION.

The question is sometimes asked, why the Roman Catholic church prefers to have its Bible in the Latin tongue instead of the language of the people. It is mainly because living languages are constantly changing, while a dead language is fixed and unchangeable for all time. The Latin is a dead language, and a correct version of the Bible in Latin would never need to be revised. The Latin edition called the Vulgate was pronounced "authentic," that is as near perfection as a version can be brought, by the Council of Trent, which was in session from 1545 to 1563. This name Vulgate was originally given to the "common edition" or "vulgate" of the Septuagint used by the Greek fathers. Thence the name was transferred to the "Italia" or the old Latin version current during the early centuries of the Christian era. At the request of the Council of Damascus in 382, the famous scholar, Jerome, undertook the revision of the New Testament. In doing this he made use of Greek copies which were then reputed trustworthy. Next he revised the Old Testament, and by the sixth century Jerome's version had received the official sanction of Pope Gregory the Great. In course of time the Tridentine decree enjoined that the Vulgate should be made as correct as possible, and after the labor of forty years the scholars of the church produced, in 1590, a version of the Vulgate which Pope Sixtus V. indorsed as authentic. This version, however, was in time revised by order of Pope Clement VIII. In 1592, it was this translation as such that was corrected in 1598 that became at length the definite Roman Catholic edition. It is entirely in keeping with these facts that a Papal commission is engaged at this hour on the Vulgate's still further correction. Some years ago Pope Pius X. designated a learned ecclesiastic, the Right Rev. Abbot Gasquet, head of a commission to ascertain if possible the true text of Jerome's version, and publish a revision of the Vulgate according to it. Of all similar enterprises this will be the most costly and perhaps the best. It is planned to photograph old manuscripts in all parts of Europe and bind these photographic copies into volumes for the Vatican library at Rome. During the five years of its work it is understood that the commission of the present Pope has already expended $50,000. The eminent Biblical scholar who is at the head of the translators is now visiting this country and lecturing in our great cities upon the work he has in hand.

PAGE'S RECALL URGED.

The recall from England of Ambassador Page was urged by Mayor Fitzgerald, of Boston, in a Panett Hall address Sunday on the ground that the Ambassador was imprudent and had "sacrificed truth in order to cater to English nobility." The Mayor characterized as "arrant nonsense" a statement credited to Mr. Page at Southampton to the effect that the United States is still English and English ruled. "No particular blood can lay claim to

FOR WOMAN'S EYE.
Taffeta silk has come back into favor again.
Soft velvet toques are more fashionable than ever.
Many taffeta shirt waists will be worn this winter.
The vogue of the double skirt seems to be increasing.
Combining two or more colors in one costume is popular.
For ordinary street wear there seems to be a tendency for longer coats.
Street costumes have skirts that are a little fuller than have been worn during the summer.
The waist line on coats remains two inches below the normal, giving an effect women strive to produce.
There is nothing startlingly new in hats. The small shape is preferred to the large one, but it does not come so far down over the ears as in the past.

GREAT CATHOLIC DRAMA.

It is not usual for Catholic papers to commend theatrical productions, but when a play of the character of James Hollock Reed's great masterpiece, "The Confession," is booked to appear in our city, at the Gayety Theater for the week beginning October 26, knowing the splendid story of the drama itself and the great moral and religious points it excites, namely the dignity and honor of the Catholic priest as a confessor and the inviolability of the sacred seal of confession, it is proper to call the attention of our readers to the beauty and majesty of this play. The fact that the play has received the endorsement of prominent Catholics in various parts of the country should commend it to all who love truth and honor. In these days when so many immoral plays stage the stage, when so frequently the deteriorates from the high and noble purpose which should ever be its aim and which were the prime purpose of the stage in old Catholic days, it is absolutely refreshing and comforting to see an author throw off the shackles of stage-bound deterioration and bravely prove that the great popular demand is not for vulgar shows and cheap plays of the passion, but for something higher, better, loftier, for that which will lift human nature from the mere thought of earth to the dignity and power of kinship with God, his church and his conscience, his fidelity to his sacred vows, his determination, despite the pressure of the State authorities, despite the instinct of fraternal affection, which would prompt him to reveal all, and thus save the life of the brother so dear to him. Notwithstanding the tears and agony of his heartbroken mother, he holds inviolate that secret given to him under the sacred seal of confession, and thus proved that the priest is indeed a man set apart, and that neither natural human affection, persecution nor death can induce him to misuse divine gift, the power to forgive and retain sin, or break the seal which is placed upon his lips in the confessional. "The Confession" unfolds a dramatic story of power, strength and literary merit seldom equaled nowadays. It shows vividly every emotion of human nature from the pure love of youth, the glory and fidelity of maternal affection, the dire results of a murderer's act, and drink with its attendant woes. "The Confession" will live, for its theme and purpose is too great to die, and we recommend it to our readers. For this important theatrical offering a scenic production befitting in detail and correctness has been built for "The conf.

John O'Connell, pastor of the congregation. Mr. Dolan is a draftsman at the car works, and until recently Miss Doyle was employed there as a stenographer. The bride and groom have gone to housekeeping and are at home at 520 Illinois avenue.

CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY.

The Catholic University at Washington has more pupils this year than ever before, more indeed than it can accommodate with room and board, notwithstanding the quarters given by Gibbons Memorial Hall. Its clerical professors number twenty-nine and its lay teachers number thirty-two. Its scientific and engineering courses are thorough. Success seems now assured.

The foundation is nearly ready for the $50,000 statue of John Barry, the father of the American navy, who captured the first British vessel which ever surrendered to the United States. The statue will be of bronze on a granite pedestal. It will stand in Franklin Park, on Fourteenth street, about six squares from the White House.

SAVING OLD CHURCH.

Under the supervision of Cardinal O'Connell, of Boston, and Bishop Chartand, of Indianapolis, the old parish church at Cahokia, Ill., will be preserved. It was built 178 years ago by the pioneer French residents of Illinois, when the village was the seat of government for that territory. The old log church will be used as a museum to house religious relics.

HIBERNIANS.

What They Have Been Doing the Past Week—General News Notes.

There were seventy-five men in the class for the first initiation at Green Day, Wis.

Fifty new members were received into the order at the last initiation held in Kansas City.

The Ladies' Auxiliary at Everett, Wash., just added twenty more names to its membership roll.

A big class will go through at the quarterly initiation to be held in Indianapolis on October 26.

The Hibernian Hall in San Francisco was taxed to its utmost capacity for the recent County Board initiation.

State President Patrick Welch will begin active work next month with a view to largely increasing the membership.

South Bend Hibernians had a great initiation last Sunday afternoon, followed by a banquet, in which the ladies participated.

Remember the anniversary celebration of Division 3 next Monday night. All Hibernians are invited and assured a good time.

Denver Hibernians have perfected an organization for giving a winter series of socials, which will be held in the Albany Hotel.

The two divisions and auxiliary of Nashville gave a most successful Irish night concert, every seat in O'Donnell Hall being occupied.

The Hibernian Rifles were prominent in the military division of the great Knights of Columbus parade at Providence, R. I., last Sunday.

The next national convention of the Ancient Order and Ladies' Auxiliary, to be held at Norfolk, will convene on the third Tuesday of July.

Divisions 1 and 8 of Manchester, N. H., have consolidated. The first meeting was held Tuesday night and took the form of a smoker. State officers being the guests.

Every member of the Ancient Order should attend at least one meeting a month. This is a duty incumbent on all, and wherever observed the divisions are strong and prosperous.

Ladies' Auxiliaries 6 and 7 of Providence, R. I., held an open meeting last Sunday evening, when an address was delivered by Rev. P. P. Keeley and a musical programme rendered.

Division 2 has out tickets for a grand encore and dance at their hall, Thirteenth and Oak, on Thursday evening, November 20. There will be exhibitions of Irish dancing, good music and handsome prizes.

Rev. Father Garrett J. Burke urges the Hibernians of Denver to erect a home of their own. This order, he says, has a mission that nothing else seems able to fulfill. Four hundred members heard his address.

Sunday afternoon the Rhode Island State and County Boards held a large and enthusiastic meeting in Providence. Right Rev. T. F. Doran, State Chaplain, and Mrs. Ellen Ryan, National President, delivered addresses.

Division 1 meets Tuesday night, and it is hoped all members will attend. Several important questions, including the holding of a holiday celebration, will be discussed and decided, and tickets for "The Confession" will be distributed.

THEY WILL LOSE.

Cardinal Gibbons, who was in Knoxville, Tenn., to speak Monday at the celebration of Discoverer's day at the National Conservation Exposition, discussed the peace movement, woman suffrage, the growth of the South and the progress of the church.

Of course I am opposed to woman suffrage. I don't want to see a woman step down to the plane of men. It will make them rough. They were not intended for this rough work of life. It will lessen their influence, and they will not be the same thereafter. They will lose their vast influence over husbands and sons. I think to enfranchise women would be a bad thing for the nation and worse for the women.

Of the growth of the South, the Cardinal said: "This entire section has made vast strides since I was Bishop of North Carolina. It is accomplishing vast things, and I believe the South is now at the beginning of an era of real prosperity and progress."

HOLY NAME RALLY.

The rally of the Holy Name Societies at Cincinnati last Sunday afternoon presented an impressive sight, there being between 30,000 and 35,000 men in line. The parade ended at the City ball park, where an altar had been erected in the center of the diamond, and around this the societies were massed while the audience was seated in the grandstands, which were taxed to their capacity. Archbishop Moeller was present and made a short address. The principal address of the day, however, was delivered by Rev. Dr. Mathew O'Brien, pastor of St. Patrick's church, Cincinnati. The parade preceding the rally was made up of sixteen divisions. Hon. Thomas Powers was the grand marshal and had a large staff of aides as well as division marshals.

RECENT DEATHS.

Monday morning the funeral of Mrs. Margaret Barrett, widow of Michael Barrett, was held from St. Patrick's church. Mrs. Barrett had many friends in the West End who mourn her death.

Funeral services over the remains of Mrs. Hattie Mudd, beloved wife of William G. Mudd, 1751 Bismarck avenue, were held Thursday morning at St. William's church. Rev. George Connor officiating at the mass of requiem. Mrs. Mudd was fifty-three years of age, her death resulting from pneumonia.

Friends and relatives were deeply grieved Wednesday morning when they learned of the death of Miss Clara O'Connor, the sixteen-year-old daughter of Patrick O'Connor, 1403 Vincennes street, New Albany. Miss O'Connor fell a victim to diphtheria, of which she had been ill but a short time. Her remains were tenderly laid to rest in Holy Trinity cemetery.

REGULAR CHAUTAUQU.

At the meeting of Division 4, A. O. H., last Monday evening in Bertrand Hall President John Hennessy lowered the bars, so to speak, on oratorical outbursts, and the consequences were that everyone present aired his views on different subjects pertaining to the good of the order. S. J. McElliot delivered a talk with boosting as his principal theme, James McTigue on the merits of a social club, Vice President Thomas Lynch on the canvass for new members, Financial Secretary Thomas J. Langan on the upbuilding of a treasury, Pat O'Donnell on the holding of delinquents, John J. Score on the benefits of a large initiation, Hon. M. J. McDerrot on leading municipal problems, L. J. Meany on the ownership of a club house, Dave Itelly ending the flow of oratory with a little talk on silence being golden or something to that effect. Much interest was manifested in the coming of "The Confession" under Hibernian auspices, and the members present promised to aid in every way. The division accepted an invitation from Division 3 to be present at its anniversary celebration next Monday evening.

GOES TO ROME TO STUDY.

The Rev. Father Patrick O'Neill, who has been attending St. Bernard College at Culman, Ala., arrived Friday morning at Augusta, Ky., for a week's visit with his parents, Mayor John O'Neill and Mrs. O'Neill, prior to departing for Rome, Italy, where he will take a four years' preparatory course before entering the priesthood. The order of St. Benedict has many hundreds of young men in the United States studying for the priesthood, but only four, one of whom is Father O'Neill, has the honor of being sent to this famous college in Rome to complete their studies. Before entering the priesthood Father Patrick was Fred O'Neill, and was famous in this section of the State as a baseball catcher. He sails for Rome today.

CONDITION UNCHANGED.

Mrs. Margaret Foley, for many years a member of St. Patrick's congregation and an earnest worker, and also prominent in the Catholic Knights and Ladies of America and the Hibernians Ladies' Auxiliary, is seriously ill at her home, 1925 Bank street. Mrs. Foley has been confined to her bed for several weeks, and while hopes are entertained for her recovery, her many friends will regret to learn that her condition remains unchanged.

GAYETY THEATRE.

"In Old Kentucky" will be the attraction at the Gayety Theatre next week. This spirited drama, while not a newcomer to playgoers here, is a very strong drawing card, and has made a name for itself as a meritorious stage offering. The drama develops quickly from the first curtain. There is a cleverly developed series of incidents leading up to a thrilling horse race. A pickaninny band of musically inclined youngsters give an animated and realistic scene of plantation dancing and singing, and render capital music as a complete brass band. Altogether, the playgoer gets his money's worth. "In Old Kentucky," Miss Maude Parker will play the leading role of Madge Brerly in the season's organization.

WALNUT THEATRE.

An unusually high-class vaudeville bill will be presented at the Walnut-street Theatre every afternoon and evening next week, each number being widely contrasting. The entire programme will be lively, and the photo picture plays, which each day, will be most interesting. Manager Hilton has already made the Walnut popular with theater-goers.

SAVES SUGAR.

IRELAND.

Record of the Most Important of the Recent Events Culled From Exchanges.

The Athy Board of Guardians have appointed Sister Mary Mercy O'Riordan nurse in the infirmary. The death has taken place at his residence at Annagh, four miles from Athlone, of William Keenan, in his 106th year.

J. Dooley has been elected Chairman of the Blir Urban Technical Committee in the place of Rev. E. J. Scannlan, resigned.

Rains have done considerable damage to the oat crop in the Ballynahinch district and farmers are experiencing difficulty in saving it.

A workman named Hanrahan, aged seventy, residing near New Ross, fell off a load of hay and received injuries from which he died.

Peter McArthur, of Sligo, has been unanimously elected a member of the Sligo Harbor Board in place of his father, the late Alex. McArthur.

Charged with threatening to shoot his neighbor, John Glynn, William Kelly, a young farmer, of Ballykinalre, was at Claremorris bound to the peace.

Rev. T. Trant, C. C., Newtownsands, has been appointed to the pastoral charge of Ballymacalligott, in succession to the Rev. McCarthy O'Connor, deceased.

The flax mills of Charles Doyle, situated at Camlough, were totally destroyed by fire. The damage is estimated at $10,000. The buildings were not insured.

At the Lisnore Quarter Sessions Dr. Patrick R. Dennehy, a prominent Lisnore Nationalist, was sworn in a Justice of the Peace for the County Waterford.

The body of Thomas McArdle, said to be a native of the Louth district, who had been missing for eight days, was found floating in the Newry canal near Ballyro.

The Antiquarian Society of Ireland has commenced operations to excavate Queen's Maeve's mound at Rathfarnham. It is supposed that this mound was built about 2,000 years ago.

The result of the South Down revision gives a Nationalist gain in that constituency of 121, leaving the seat more impregnable than ever for its popular member, Jeremiah McVeagh, M. P.

A beautiful Celtic cross has been erected by the parishioners of Castlepollard to the memory of the late Very Rev. H. Farrelly. The inscription testifies to his great labors and munificent generosity.

After a struggle, in which both parties fought for all they were worth, Armagh City has been held by the Nationalists. A sound drubbing was administered to their opponents through the revision just held.

During the year 1912 the total number of houses in Dublin condemned as unfit for human habitation and ordered to be demolished was 102. Only five were put in order and reopened.

The Rev. William Hanrahan, recently ordained at All Hallows College for the American mission, has left for Wheeling, W. Va., the field of his future missionary labors. He is the second son of William Hanrahan, National teacher, Letterkelly, and was born at Miltown-Malbay.

There will be very deep regret on the part of friends in many parts of the South of Ireland at the death, after some months' illness of Rev. Father O'Keefe, of Cappawhite. He was exceedingly popular, and his devotion to the interests of his parishioners will be a gracious memory.

BISHOP SELECTS GRAVE.

Right Rev. James A. McFaul, Bishop of Trenton, although enjoying good health, has chosen his last resting place and ordered his monument. He has gone about this gruesome duty as though it was an every day incident in his affairs. For his grave Bishop McFaul has selected a plot of ground in front of Morris Hall, a home for aged women at Lawrenceville. This institution was erected by the Bishop several years ago and has proven one of the most successful of his kind in the United States. Dennis Kealey, a marble cutter, was shocked when Bishop McFaul ordered him to make a Celtic cross so that it could be placed over his grave. The marble cutter became agitated, but the Bishop allayed his fears by assuring him that he had no intention of dying soon.

FORTY HOURS.

Forty hours' devotion will be opened with high mass tomorrow morning at St. Francis of Assisi church. Rev. Father Rotbeut will conduct the services, which will close Tuesday night. Local priests will assist and preach the sermons.

CATHOLICS IN NEBRASKA.

According to the latest statistics there are 100,783 members of the Catholic church in Nebraska. They lead all the denominations, the Methodists coming next with 64,352.
